

As a professional flight attendant I am strongly opposed to the use of cell-phones during flight. There is no proof that cell-phone signals do not interfere with aircraft systems. Also, such usage could compromise aircraft security as it would enable potential hijackers to communicate more easily with one another. It is already difficult enough for flight attendants to keep passengers compliant with existing regulations and safety measures, and would surely be extremely dangerous during an inflight emergency. Further, the noise created by passengers all trying to outshout each other would be unbearable for flight attendants who already work in cramped, noisy conditions with poor air quality. It would also be extremely unpleasant for those passengers who want to relax or sleep during flight. If inflight cellphone usage were to become a reality, there is no doubt that air-rage would increase exponentially. Please do not allow this technology to be introduced. Just because it's possible doesn't mean it should be allowed!
